

Migratory Birds 21/22

“Migratory birds” is the metaphor for working on the idea of a global world where the flow of people is a constant. In La Plana, our high school, there are 20 different nationalities, 13 languages are spoken and 6 religions coexist. With this project we will try to analyse the causes of this multiculturalism, that is to say, what has brought them here, what ethical and moral implications this cultural amalgam has and, above all, get to know the richness of such diversity.

The project is related to two Sustainable Goals. Goal 10 - Reduce inequality within and among countries and Goal 4 - Ensure inclusive and equitable quality education and promote lifelong learning opportunities for all. International projects offer students the opportunity to open up their eyes, discover new countries as well as the possibility to work hand-in-hand with students from other cultures and see that this diversity joins us more than separates us.

The election day was a busy day, with many students voting. We showed all the logos in the race and then we gave each student a disposable vote token. What a thrill when we learned that THE WINNER IS...

First mobility with our Migratory Birds 🦅. We were hosted by our Catalan partners...no...not partners but FAMILY ❤️. Discovering differences and comparing similarities. Sharing interests and cooperating in groups. Different cultures, religions and backgrounds united as ONE.

We are preparing to integrate our lessons with STEAM methodology. Here we are during a 3 day full immersion STEAM teacher training course at Marsala, Italy. We even learned how to build and program a robot 🤖! 😄

INSEGNAMO LE STEAM

- Assessing the Readiness of the Institution: Assessing the institution's readiness to implement STEAM education involves evaluating the current state of the institution, including the curriculum, teaching practices, and resources available. This assessment should consider the institution's mission, vision, and strategic plan, as well as the needs and interests of the students and faculty.
- Engendering the Quality of the Learning Experience: Creating a high-quality learning experience for students involves designing a curriculum that is relevant, engaging, and challenging. This includes integrating STEAM concepts into existing courses and developing new courses that focus on STEAM education. It also involves providing students with hands-on learning experiences, such as projects, experiments, and field trips.
- Providing a Supportive Environment for STEAM Learning: Creating a supportive environment for STEAM learning involves providing students with the resources and support they need to succeed. This includes providing access to STEAM resources, such as textbooks, software, and equipment, as well as providing students with the support of faculty and staff.
- Measuring the Impact of STEAM Education: Measuring the impact of STEAM education involves tracking student learning outcomes and assessing the effectiveness of the program. This can be done through a variety of methods, including standardized tests, student self-reports, and employer feedback.

These are some of the places in Rome that we showed (with great pleasure and also quite proudly) to the colleagues from Catalonia and Crete. We want you to feel involved as well

The number of students per class (3 or 5) leaving to Catalonia and to Greece was drawn by lot in the presence of the students' representatives and of the teachers involved in the project. This picture shows exactly that moment.

Our students are filling in their profiles these days so that we can find similar partners for them.

The first meeting was a great experience. It seemed like we'd known each other since ever, but we hadn't seen each other in a while. We immediately entered into great harmony and worked together as if we were used to, with easyness and deep communion of intent. Once back home, we reported to colleagues and pupils and we passed on our enthusiasm to them too. Surely, even our kids will live wonderful experience!
